UM PROFESSOR TO DISCUSS
WAR DESTRUCTION JULY 29

MISSOULA--

Dr. E. W. Pfeiffer, a University of Montana zoology professor, will discuss a topic entitled "The Destruction of Indochina" July 29 at 8:15 p.m. in the UM Music Recital Hall.

The program, which is sponsored by the Universities National Anti-War Fund and the University Environmentalists, will be open to the public without charge.

Dr. Ronald E. Erickson, a UM chemistry professor who is organizing the discussion by Dr. Pfeiffer, said the main objective of the program on July 29 "will be to make the public aware of the problems caused by war in several nations:"

"Dr. Pfeiffer spent some time in South Vietnam last year and in Cambodia this winter, and he recently returned from Laos and North Vietnam," said Dr. Erickson. "His major interest in all of those countries concerns the ecological or environmental damage caused by the war in Indochina."

Slides and films made by Dr. Pfeiffer while he was in Indochina will be presented during the program. Some of the film depicts the damage done in Cambodia by U.S. defoliation bombings in 1968 and 1969.
